Creating a Supportive and Sustainable Working Environment for Teachers

To enhance the quality of education, it is essential that every teacher can maintain and improve their own health and well-being, secure sufficient time to engage with students, and take on new educational challenges. We believe that teachers perform at their best when they work in a supportive and sustainable environment.

With this goal in mind, Ritsumeikan has been a pioneer in promoting sustainable school education by addressing long working hours, particularly by reducing tasks that do not necessarily require teaching qualifications or expertise. We strive to create a workplace where teachers can work with professional pride, motivation, and a sense of fulfillment.

★ Annualized Working Hours System ★

Since the 2020 academic year, Ritsumeikan has adopted an annualized working hours system. This system enables teachers to organize and carry out educational activities within their prescribed working hours, promoting a healthier and more sustainable work style.

Creating a Supportive and Sustainable Working Environment for Teachers

★ Work Style Reform Promotion Leave (250 Hours per Year in AY2026) ★

To support diverse working styles and work-life balance, Ritsumeikan provides Work Style Reform Promotion Leave. Teachers are encouraged to work flexibly, including adjusting their daily starting and finishing times to better accommodate their professional and personal needs.

★ A Collaborative Work Environment: No One Works Alone ★

Ritsumeikan promotes a collaborative approach to work by reducing the burden on teachers through various support measures. These include outsourcing tasks that do not require a teaching license, employing school support staff to handle administrative duties, appointing club activity instructors, and assigning specialist staff to advance distinctive educational programs.

Through these initiatives, Ritsumeikan continues to pursue its own distinctive model of work style reform, enabling teachers to focus more on teaching and student learning while maintaining a healthy and rewarding professional life.

The Educators We Seek

We Are Looking for Teachers with the Passion and Aspiration to Shape the Future of Education

Ritsumeikan recruits full-time teachers for its affiliated schools through a unified, institution-wide hiring process rather than through individual schools.

This approach reflects our belief that, while each affiliated school develops its own distinctive educational strengths, the schools should also support one another and work together toward the advancement of the Ritsumeikan Academy as a whole. To foster this collaborative culture, we promote professional development opportunities, collaboration among teachers across affiliated schools, and faculty mobility between schools as part of long-term career development.

To nurture students who can confidently engage with and contribute to a global society, Ritsumeikan seeks educators who embody the following qualities:

The Educators We Seek

We Are Looking for Teachers with the Passion and Aspiration to Shape the Future of Education

We seek teachers who:

- Possess the passion and aspiration to take on new educational challenges without being constrained by conventional practices, based on the principles of the Ritsumeikan Charter, while pursuing their own professional growth and maintaining a healthy work-life balance within a comprehensive private educational institution connected to society and the wider world.
- Demonstrate a strong sense of ethics and responsibility as educators, grounded in the founding spirit and educational philosophy of Ritsumeikan, and are committed to fostering students' personal development through respect for others, rejection of violence, and the encouragement of independence and self-motivation.
- Continuously strive to enhance their professional expertise and teaching effectiveness in response to changing educational needs, and are dedicated to developing students into independent and self-directed learners.
- Remain committed to ongoing professional learning and growth, particularly in educational approaches and instructional competencies that are increasingly important in the modern era, including inquiry-based learning, active learning, career education, foreign language proficiency, ICT literacy, and digital skills.
- Value diversity, demonstrate originality grounded in deep thinking, and collaborate effectively with colleagues to advance innovative educational practices as part of a professional learning community.
