Professor Rory Medcalf has been Head of the National Security College at the Australian National University since January 2015. His professional background involves more than two decades of experience across diplomacy, intelligence analysis, think tanks and journalism, including a formative role as Director of the International Security Program at the Lowy Institute, a senior strategic analyst with the Office of National Assessments, Canberra's peak intelligence analysis agency, and a member of the expert panel providing independent advice on the Australian Government's 2016 Defense White Paper. His experience as an Australian diplomat included a posting to New Delhi, a secondment to Japan's foreign ministry, and truce monitoring after the civil conflict in Bougainville. He has contributed to three landmark reports on nuclear arms control: the 1996 Canberra Commission, Tokyo Forum, and 2009 International Commission on Nuclear Non-Proliferation and Disarmament. Currently, he is a member of the editorial boards of Asia Policy and the Australian Journal of International Affairs, a Non-resident Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy with the Brookings Institution, and a Non-resident Fellow with the Lowy Institute for International Policy and the Seapower Centre of the Royal Australian Navy. His research areas include Australia's security challenges, the further development of an Indo-Pacific concept of the Asian strategic environment, China-India relations, and prospects for maritime and nuclear stability in Indo-Pacific Asia.
