Global Studies Major / Culture and Society Program

Global Studies Major—Program Features

1) Governance and Peace Program

The dynamic state of international order can be studied from four major angles. First is historical understanding, how the current international order was historically formed. Second is recognizing the legal system that supports the current international order. Third is analysis of politics in various world regions. And last is searching for ways to realize peace and solve conflicts. This program's ultimate goal is the pursuit of a fair and peaceful international order.

2) Development and Sustainability Program

Taking interdisciplinary, systematic, and practical approaches, this program probes into a desirable international cooperation and development system based on the development of a lasting and peaceful balance between all global areas and nations. The program approaches various issues involving international cooperation and development. It then searches for solutions based on international cooperation involving states and international organizations, as well as business, NGOs, and citizen-level activities.

3) Culture and Society Program

Through an interdisciplinary approach, this program studies the relationship between international politics, economics, social forces, and culture, including intergroup conflict and coexistence. The program considers how processes of globalization are having disparate impacts within and between societies. Students in this program will examine social relations in various societies, explore the connection between their society and the rest of the world, and search for ways in which all peoples can peacefully live together.

Core Program—Fundamental Literature List

The following are lists of fundamental literature for each core program that include fundamental literary works and classics. These lists are made available to help you select your core program as well as to recommend works to read during your time as a student. Furthermore, the textbook that you use in Advanced Seminar (starting from fall semester of 2nd year) will be selected from these lists.

IR-DS 207 Global Simulation Gaming (GSG) Introduction, Class/Actor Selection

1. Course Outline

GSG (Global Simulation Gaming) is a special course dating back to the foundation of the College of International Relations. In this virtual reality gaming course, all students become one of several actors (in charge of states, UN, NGOs, mass media, or the international community) and “experience” the series of processes in international politics and economics such as agenda setting, policymaking, negotiation, and exercising policy. At the College of IR, all second year students are required to register for this course which serves as an overview of the introductory curriculum and a launching point to more advanced studies. Ahead of the main event, students will conduct research on actors, hold presentations, deliberate policies, and attend a total of 10 joint classes, including mini-GSG events.

Two actor preparation classes will be established, one in English and one in Japanese. The main event that follows will be conducted in English. Our aims are to advance the integration of GS and IR Majors and closely simulate an actual international negotiation with various actors. Please note that GS Major students will belong to the English classes, except for the Media actor category.

How to Register

You must register from the special page setup online.

Access: manaba+R→ “College of IR Students Page”→“Seminar / Program Selection”

→“Core Program and GSG Class application”

<What Logging Into manaba+R Will Look Like From January 2018>

The diagram illustrates the navigation process within the manaba+R system. On the left, a screenshot of the 'College of IR Students Page' is shown, with a red box highlighting a link in the sidebar. A speech bubble points to this link, labeling it 'College of IR Students Page'. A large yellow arrow points from this page to the right, where a screenshot of the 'Seminar / Program Selection' page is displayed. A speech bubble points to the 'Seminar / Program Selection' link in the sidebar of the second page, labeling it 'Seminar / Program Selection'.

2. Registration Steps

(1) Core Program selection –For 2017 April enrollment students-

Please select one program from the three. Your selected program will be final; you cannot change your program once decided.

2017 September enrollment students will register next year.

(2) IR-DS207 Global Simulation Gaming

–For 2017 April & 2016 September enrollment students-

2017 September enrollment students will register next year.

Please select your desired actor categories from the English Classes list (your first through 5 choices). If there are more applicants than spaces available, students will be selected by lottery.

3. Points to Consider

The actor category of “Media” will be run in Japanese. However, at the Global Simulation Gaming final, articles may be written in English.

Students are required to register for IR-DS207 Global Simulation Gaming (*) Students who fail to complete the necessary procedures in the specified periods will be automatically placed into the class with the least number of applicants. In the case that you think whether to take leave of absence in next year, please register if your LOA haven't been already permitted by the university.

(*) This excludes students studying abroad when the course is set to run. If you are officially set to study abroad, you do not have to register. However, even if you plan on studying abroad but have not officially decided with the university, please register.
