1. ES System

A brief history of ES

Educational Supporters (hereinafter referred to as “ES”) are aimed to connect instructors and students in a class of curricular courses, and to guide students in the class toward deeper learning. It is a productive academic activity in which each ES member can also grow and mature. The system has been in use since 2004, to realize our agreement at the AY2003 University Plenary Council that all the students in the Ritsumeikan campuses grow as students with a solid academic basis and rich personality.

Since introduced, ES has been giving worthy contributions in an ideal educational environment in which students can themselves spontaneously decide to learn, and then establish a self-study style, and pursue deeper learning with a sense of fulfilment. ES have also been contributing to cultivating an assisting environment in which a variety of experiences, whether within the range of regular courses or not, can lead students to learning.

ES are supporters of learning

The ES system is a structure in which students learn from each other under guidance and assistance from instructors/staff members. The role of ES is to give assistance in the classes, and assistance in studies outside of the classes. Note that the responsibility always belongs to the instructor of the class.

The task of ES is to assist students’ learning in collaboration with instructors by joining the class as a supporter of learning. To realize a better class based on a better collaboration of ES and instructors, sufficient preparation, and a close communication/collaboration system between them is necessary.

ES involve educational activity

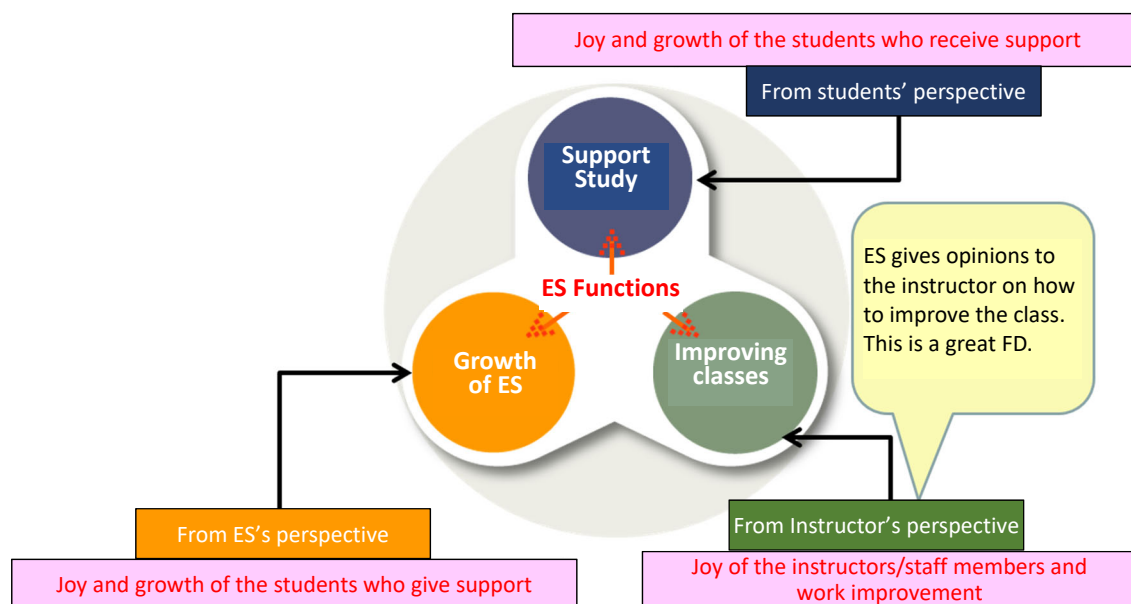

The key duty of ES is to join a specific class as a supporter of learning, to assist the students in cooperation with the instructor, and to establish a thriving “learning community” in each class. Also, what ES is assigned is not a mere part-time job; it is an educational activity to establish a learning style for course students as well as to target the growth of ES students. ES are expected not only to assist the learning of the other students in the class as key persons of a “learning community,” but also to approach the ES activity with a full strength to realize growth of themselves.

The instructor of the class, and the college or the academic institution to join the ES System are expected to have a systematic approach so that each ES member can fully and actively play its part in the “learning community.”

2. Role and Functions

Purpose of ES

There are three purposes of ES: Support study, Improve classes, and help ES to grow and mature themselves (see below).

○ Study support and improve classes

More specifically, ES join the specific classes as “learning supporters,” in which they 1) establish a “learning community” in each class in collaboration with the instructor, and 2) assist the learning of the students in the class as key persons of the “learning community.”

○ Growth of ES themselves

ES aim to grow themselves through the ES activity.

Function and Duties of ES

Based on the objectives above, the three functions are assigned:

Function	Outline
1. Class Support	1-1) Class Support to assist students' learning in class
2. Learning Facilitation	1-2) Learning Facilitation to assist interactive class operation
3. Study Support	1-3) Study Support to assist diversified learning outside of scheduled class hour

The above three functions are specified as the tasks stated in Table 1 below. Under Table 1, duties that an ES cannot take on are described; read this part for clarification. Training (jointly offered by the supervisory office and the college/academic institution, and those separately and independently performed by the supervisory office and the college/academic institution) are also included in the duties.

4. General Rules for ES Duties

Be sure to follow the general rules stated below when you perform ES duties.

(1) Confirm the course "ES Work Assist (for ES)" in manaba+R

When the appointment as ES is determined, the ES students are automatically enrolled to the course "ES Work Assist (for ES)" in manaba+R. In this course, important information for the ES job including the ES training guidance, submission method of "ES Final Work Report" is presented. Be sure to confirm this course periodically.

(2) Hold a meeting with the instructor

ES should have meetings with instructors before the start of class to discuss the following:

- (1) Roles of ES and Instructor
- (2) How ES should respond to students in their questions and offer them advice

- (3) Details regarding the duties and working hours (You should not take on duties not written on the ES Notice of Employment)
- (4) How to submit and process the "ES Monthly Report & Invoice" each month
- (5) Any other necessary matters

(3) Know the duties ES are not permitted

ES are not permitted to perform the following duties:

 - Assistance in class such as material distribution or collection of submissions
 - Organizing submitted materials
 - Creating or compiling in-class deliverables such as presentation summaries

(4) Observe the direction system on the job

In some classes in which ES is assigned, a part of the class can be subcontracted to a company outside of the university, where personnel other than instructors employed by the university gives the class. In this case, the instructor of the outsourced classes cannot directly task an ES.

(5) Report the hours you worked

ES members need to report the actual working hours to the instructor in charge of the class. Also, ES needs to input the same contents with the reported work performance on the "ES Monthly Work Report & Invoice" provided by the administrative office that employs ES. For the "Support work outside of the classes" which arises from the third function ("Study Support"), consult how to report the working hours with the instructor of the class or the administrative office.

[How to handle the works outside of classes]

- Responding to questions or offering consultations to students out of class hours
After confirming how many hours are needed and the specific details with the class instructor in advance, ES should send an email to the class instructor after finishing the job.
- Creating materials and making corrections that do not involve academic records
After confirming how many hours are needed and the specific details with the class instructor in advance, ES should send an email to the class instructor and the administrative office attached with the created documents (evidence).

(6) Submit “ES Monthly Work Report & Invoice” every month

When the job is completed for each month, submit the “ES Monthly Report & Invoice” to the instructor of the class and obtain approval (stamp). After that, submit it to the administrative office that employs ES. According to the contents in the “ES Monthly Report & Invoice,” payment is processed. (The “ES Monthly Report & Invoice” is provided by the administrative office that employs ES.)

When it is difficult to obtain a stamp from the instructor in person because the class is web-based, submit the “ES Monthly Report & Invoice” with an “electronic record communicated with the instructor showing the agreement on the work result.” *

*For example, email messages demonstrating that the instructor confirmed the work result presented from the student

(7) Submit “ES Final Work Report”

When all the activities are completed, the ES should submit “ES Final Work Report.” Note that the submission of this report is mandatory. This report is utilized for verifying the effect and for improving the ES System in subsequent years. Detailed information on how to submit the Final Work Report is made available via manaba+R (the course only ES is enrolled) from the controlling section by the end of semester.

(4) When advising students having private conversations in class

The role of ES is to assist classes. It is the responsibility of the instructor of the class to take care of the class. When you need to advise a student to refrain from disruptive private conversations during classes, first consult with the instructor, and pay careful attention in the action.

[Reference] The responsibility of instructors, TA and ES regarding warnings for disruptive chatting and maintaining order in the classroom.

The following was decided on July 27, 2006 by the Executive Board of Trustees regarding the responsibilities of the instructor, TA and ES in managing the classroom environment pertaining to warnings for whispering and chatting during class.

“ Instructors should understand that they are seen as educators both inside and outside of the classroom. Above all, however, they bear all responsibility in their class(es). That is to say, it is the duty of the instructor to maintain order and a good environment in the classroom. This not only pertains to whispering and chatting in the classroom, but any disruptive behavior that hinders the right of other students to learn in the classroom. Therefore, from an academic perspective, instructors must make it their duty to achieve a classroom environment conducive to learning by properly handling behavior such as disruptive whispering and chatting.

In order for TA and ES to properly support courses to the very best of their ability, they must work closely and make plans with the course instructor. If an instructor relies on their TA or ES to conduct student guidance without sufficiently instructing and working together with the TA/ES and a problem arises, the instructor will be held solely responsible.
