

The consideration of 21st century's home education

HIRAI Issei

GraduateSchool of Science for Human Services, Ritsumeikan University

Key words: home education, educational zeal, mother

This study explores mothers who have educational zeal. These mothers push their children and force them to study hard. Sometimes, such families have big issues. Therefore, this study uses questionnaires and search do you think you have educational zeal or not, what educational services are you using, and how do you restrict children's entertainment. This research was able to get twenty one mothers answers. About educational zeal or not, ten mothers answer that they think they have educational zeal, four mothers answer that they think they do not, and seven mothers answer neither. About educational services, twenty mothers answer that they use something about educational services, for example, cram school and other lessons. About children's entertainment, twenty mothers answer that they have rules about entertainment. This study collects twenty one cases about whether mothers have educational zeal or not, using educational services, and restricting children's entertainment. Henceforward, we should collect data from other family members and children who are educated and compare with other nations.