Survey Report on Japanese Dyeing Stencils (katagami) in European Collections

11/02/2011 Graduate School of Letters, Mizuho KAMO

ITP Program Schedules

• 21/08/2010 -31/08/2010

02/09/2010-17/09/2010

• 20/09/2010-24/09/2010

• 27/09/2010-19/10/2010

National Gallery, Prague

British Museum, London

Edoardo Chiossone

Museum of Oriental Art, Genoa

Chiossone katagami collection

Royal Art and History Museum, Brussels

Work shop

International Exchange モノの移動・イメージの受容・変容

•18/09/2010, SOAS, London "Katagami in twenty-first century Japan and Europe".

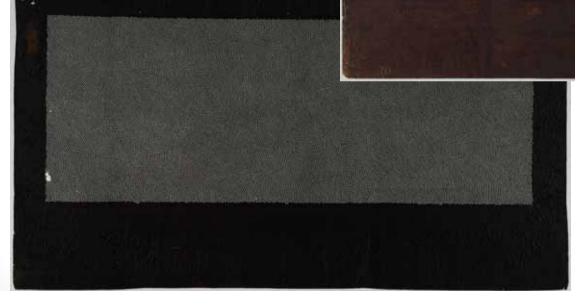

International Exchange Workshop at SOAS 18 September 2010

KYOTEC katagami collection

KTS00135 KYOLITE Co. collection Kyoto, Japan

KTS17734 KYOLITE Co. collection Kyoto, Japan

- This collection has eighteen thousand katagami, mainly consisting of Meiji –Taisho – Showa period stencils.
- The collection represents wide variety of motifs, since the founder of the company tried to collect various designs from all over Japan.

Chiossone katagami collection

- The Chiossone collection has seven hundred katagami
- There are two unique features of the collection:
- 1, Many of the katagami designs are pictorial
- 2, Chiossone's katagami collection is related to his Ukiyo-e collection

Chiossone katagami collection

KG-4005 Edoardo Chiossone Museum of Oriental Art

KG-3979 Edoardo Chiossone Museum of Oriental Art

KG-4074 Edoardo Chiossone Museum of Oriental Art

「真写月花之姿絵」and katagami

KG-4074

009-0007

Nakamura Shikan (四代目中村芝翫)

Kawarazaki Gonjuro (初代 河原崎権十郎)

S-2124 Edoardo Chiossone Museum of Oriental Art

Conclusions

- While working on the Chiossone collection I could identify relations between the designs represented in the Ukiyo-e and the katagami collections.
- It seems that Chiossone made a conscious selection based on his own taste and interest.