

How has Abe's nationalism affected Japanese politics and diplomacy? Professor Jeff Kingston, an expert in Japanese Studies, answers this question.

SPECIAL LECTURE

"The Implications of Abe's Nationalism Domestically and Diplomatically"

Speaker:

Professor Jeff Kingston

Date: November 12, 2014

(Wednesday) 16:20 ~ 18:00

Keigakukan 244 Ritsumeikan University
Kinugasa Campus

Hosted by:

Ritsumeikan Global Innovation Research Organization (R-GIRO)

and

Ritsumeikan University Graduate School of International Relations (GSIR)

For more information please send e-mail to:

towards-new-peace-studies@hotmail.co.jp

Jeff Kingston is the Director of Asian Studies and Professor of History at Temple University Japan. He has written extensively on modern Japan including a second edition of his monograph Contemporary Japan (2013) and his edited volume, Critical Issues in Contemporary Japan (2014) which has just been published. He also writes a weekly column "Counterpoint" for the Japan Times. Professor Kingston's areas of expertise are the political economy and social history of modern Japan, modern Southeast Asia, and regionalism in Asia. Professor Kingston's op-eds and book reviews appear in the International Herald Tribune, Wall Street Journal, Financial Times, Japan Times and Bangkok Post.