

It was still early evening, but it would soon get dark.

He was familiar with the sea as he had fished here many times, knew where the land was and could guess which direction the boat was being carried towards.

He thought.

"I will definitely be back, so don't worry. The sea is calm, and the boat is safe. Wait calmly!"

I would swim towards land to get help.

He made up his mind and told his daughter

As it was a small boat, there was no means to call for help.

He just swam on, thinking about his daughter waiting by herself on the boat.

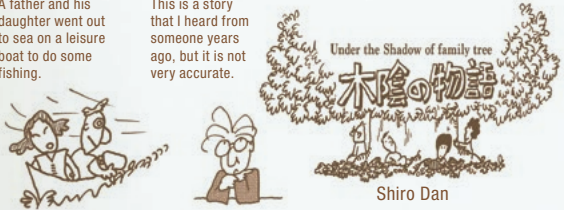

He was confident of his swimming skills and physical strength, so he was not worried.

That said, the father started to swim away from the boat.

A father and his daughter went out to sea on a leisure boat to do some fishing.

This is a story that I heard from someone years ago, but it is not very accurate.

After a while they noticed that they were quite far out to sea.

It was lovely weather, and very soon they were really enjoying themselves.

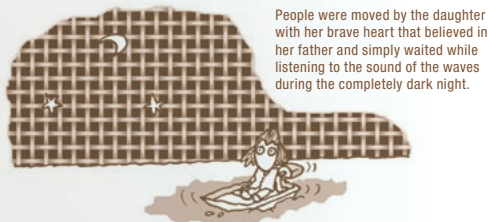

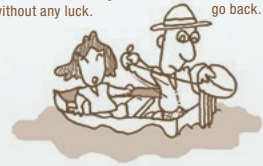

Looking at his daughter's worried face, the father said,

"Don't worry. Your dad will sort this out!"

However, it wasn't working now. Again and again, they tried to start the engine without any luck.

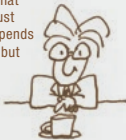

As they were satisfied with their fishing, the engine was turned on to go back.

People were moved by the daughter with her brave heart that believed in her father and simply waited while listening to the sound of the waves during the completely dark night.

Often we hear the following, "What should I believe in?"

Once again, I feel that whether we can trust someone or not depends not on that person but on ourselves.

The parents who raised her in this way were also praised.

Words are easy, but to be someone like that, what is needed?

Believe in myself, believe in someone, believe in tomorrow, believe in the future.

An ability to believe is something cultivated during the normal process of growing up.

Therefore, search activities started at dawn the following day.

It took him longer than expected to reach the shore due to the current.

Many people talked to the rescued daughter, saying, "You must have been so scared! You did great."

The boat had been carried away further than anticipated, but as the father's information was correct, it was found that same morning.

Everyone wants to believe, but because they cannot they become nervous.

Hearing this, the people were surprised.

But she answered, "I wasn't worried at all because Dad said he would come back to help me if I stayed calm."

